Gratitude and compassion. Two words Angie Fisher prayed would describe her life in 2016.

Fisher was grateful for the outpouring of kind words from fellow team members after she was named chief nursing officer for Brunswick Medical Center in 2015. She was empathetic and wanted to ensure her team showed compassion every day to each other, to patients and to their family members. “Compassionate, connected care is the special ingredient that you give to our patients each and every day,” expressed Fisher.

Tragically, Fisher died in a car accident on January 21, 2016. She was an incredible part of the Brunswick Medical Center team and dedicated much of her 18-year career to caring for patients in the Brunswick community.

“The loss of Angie was huge to everyone who knew her,” said Shelbourn Stevens, president and chief operating officer of Brunswick Medical Center. “She was the voice of reason, a resource, a comforter, a teacher and a friend. And she had an infectious smile.”

Stevens said Fisher always had a calming spirit and would constantly remind her team that patient care came first. “Angie was using the word compassion long before it became one of Novant Health’s values,” Stevens said.

Fisher believed education was the foundation to our future and she was always supportive of team members continuing their education. The Brunswick Medical Center Foundation board generously created the Angela M. Fisher Memorial Education Fund in her memory.

The fund is used for education of team members at Brunswick Medical Center. In 2016, nearly 200 team members benefited from continued education, certifications and seminars through the Angela M. Fisher Memorial Education Fund.

With your donation to this important fund, the foundation can carry on Fisher’s legacy and help improve and save lives at Brunswick Medical Center.

“No parent is successful alone and this program connects parents to services so they can better connect with their infant. Kate B. Reynolds Charitable Trust, The Duke Endowment and Novant Health are willing to commit to Forsyth Connects because they see the benefit to their community,” said *Kenneth A. ## Foundation highlight | Forsyth Connects

In 2016, Kate B. Reynolds Charitable Trust and The Duke Endowment partnered to fund an innovative, comprehensive program for all Forsyth County new mothers and babies called Forsyth Connects. The program offers access to free in-home visits by a Novant Health registered nurse who schedules follow-up visits as appropriate.

The initial three-year, $2.6 million combined grant effort connects nurses and families during the first weeks of an infant’s life to offer support, education and information.

Forsyth Connects stats:

460 home visits completed between program launch in August 2016 through end of year by nine Forsyth Connects home visit nurses

100 patients required a referral or intense follow-up appointment

Community referrals include:

- » The Salvation Army
- » Crisis Control
- » Cribs for Kids
- » Local fire departments
- » WIC
- » Department of Social Services
- » Nursing Mother’s Place
- » Welcome Baby
- » Daymark
- » Work Family Resource Center
- » Goodwill

43 obstetrics and pediatric follow-up visits were required for:

- » Mastitis
- » High blood pressure
- » Postpartum depression
- » Urinary tract infection
- » Laryngomalasia
- » Esophageal discoordination
- » Congenital airway malformation
- » GERD

Novant Health Presbyterian Medical Center Foundation

Foundation highlight | John M. and Claudia W. Belk Heart and Vascular Institute and Edward I. and Agnes B. Weisiger Cancer Institute

The number of people affected by cancer and heart disease each year is staggering. In 2016, Presbyterian Medical Center Foundation reached $27.3 million in its GroundBreaking campaign for a state-of-the-art facility to treat those conditions. The John M. and Claudia W. Belk Heart and Vascular Institute and Edward I. and Agnes B. Weisiger Cancer Institute will include a pediatric specialty complex to address pediatric oncology and cardiology.

We honor the intent of our donors by effectively communicating the impact of their gift.

-Our Beliefs

The Charlotte region is one of the fastest growing areas in the nation and is expected to almost double in size within a decade. Significant regional need for cancer and cardiology treatment currently outpaces the region's ability to respond, even as new programs and centers are developed.

Designed to create an environment conducive to personalized patient care in both cardiovascular disease and cancer, the John M. and Claudia W. Belk Heart and Vascular Institute and Edward I. and Agnes B. Weisiger Cancer Institute will enhance patient centered care, improve accessibility, increase affordability, improve care coordination and provide evidence-based care.

Scheduled for groundbreaking in February 2018, the institute will include the following heart and vascular and cancer services and programs:

- » Heart and vascular services: cardiothoracic surgery, multidisciplinary clinic, congestive heart failure clinic, cardiac prevention and rehabilitation, heart and wellness, MRI, CT, imaging services and support services
- » Cancer services: radiation oncology, surgical oncology, medical oncology, multidisciplinary clinic, diagnostic imaging, pathology, oncology research, breast cancer center, outpatient chemotherapy, cancer support services and infusion center

Foundation dollars at work:

 468

nurses benefited from continuing education, certifications and scholarship funds

 64

families of pediatric cancer patients received support for expenses

 $46,000

invested in the Child Life program at Novant Health Hemby Children's Hospital to cover operations

 $17,000

distributed to 63 team members in financial need resulting from an unforeseen emergency

By uniting heart and cancer specialists, we will streamline communication, facilitate collaboration and make it easy to access the resources patients need for their journey. Services and amenities at the institute will include:

- » Café
- » Cancer clinics for radiation oncology, medical oncology, surgical oncology and gynecologic oncology
- » Cancer urgent care
- » Cardio-oncology, an emerging field of medicine dedicated to minimizing the cardiovascular impact of cancer treatment
- » Cardiac and cancer rehabilitation and wellness, offering exercise, yoga, massage, nutrition and PT/OT/speech services
- » Cardiac prevention and screening services
- » Chapel
- » Dedicated cardiac and cancer nurse navigators
- » Heart and vascular clinics for cardiology, cardiovascular surgery, congestive heart failure, atrial fibrillation, peripheral vascular disease and valve disorders
- » Imaging services
- » Infusion center with 80 bays
- » Research and clinical trials

- » Retail pharmacy
- » Sky bridge connecting the facility to Presbyterian Medical Center to support continuity of care
- » Multidisciplinary cancer clinics, where newly diagnosed patients can have their case reviewed by a team of experts

Novant Health UVA Health System Prince William Medical Center Foundation

Foundation highlight | Team Member Grant Program

For many years, our foundation has awarded grants through a competitive process to assist team members who want to present a program or service to impact the health of our residents in Northern Virginia.

The foundation is particularly interested in impactful programs and services that address Novant Health UVA Health System's top four significant health priorities: diabetes; obesity; chronic diseases, including cancer, heart disease and stroke; and mental health, including substance abuse.

In 2016, the foundation awarded $3,600 to the Breast Center to provide the Breast Cancer Treatment Handbook to newly diagnosed breast cancer patients. The handbook is a comprehensive patient guide that covers everything from diagnosis, to treatment and survivorship. These are the common topics found in most breast education pieces; however, this handbook goes much further in discussing many other topics in breast cancer such as: the emotional impact, relationship with your partner, telling your children, calming your fears, surgical treatment decisions, reconstructive surgery, the surgical experience, understanding your pathology report, understanding chemotherapy treatments, radiation therapy, complementary therapies, prosthetic selection, sexuality, future fertility, care of the surgical arm, health insurance and employment issues, facing the future and monitoring your future health for recurrence.

“These books are invaluable to what we are trying to do for these women in need.”

- John Williams, MD

The foundation also received a compelling grant request from the case management department. Daily, the healthcare team at Prince William Medical Center and Novant Health UVA Health System Haymarket Medical Center were faced with a growing issue of patients being unable to afford life-sustaining medications. Many patients could not afford a prescription drug plan. Some did not have any medical coverage at all. Patients often needed short-term medication assistance to bridge the gap between a reduced cost clinic appointment or approval for a medication assistance program. Patients who were unable to afford medications prescribed to them were at a greater risk to have a preventable hospital readmission or emergency room visit.

Case management received $20,000 from the foundation to implement the Medication Assistance program, which would allow short-term medication assistance (no more than a 30-day supply) to be provided to patients who met certain criteria. This assistance would allow the patient to continue treatment prescribed by a healthcare provider in the inpatient or emergency room setting while a long-term medication assistance solution could be found for them.

Foundation highlight | 3-D Mammography

Through the generosity of the Cannon Foundation and Charitable Trust and 382 donors, Rowan Medical Center Foundation purchased a new mobile mammography coach with 3-D mammography. The investment was $750,000, with $325,000 provided by the Cannon Foundation and Charitable Trust and the remaining $425,000 raised by individual donors. The coach brings mammography services to where patients live, work and attend civic or faith-based activities in Rowan County and surrounding areas.

3-D mammography, also called tomosynthesis, is an FDA-approved advanced technology that takes multiple images of breast tissue to recreate a 3-D image of the breast. Traditional mammography obtains a single image. Multiple images of 3-D breast tissue slices give doctors a clearer image of breast masses and make it easier to detect breast cancer. With 3-D mammography, the provider's chances of finding small cancer lesions in the breast increase by 41 percent.

The 39-foot-long coach built by Winnebago was staffed by trained mammography technicians. The vehicle is completely self-contained with its own generator and requires nothing more than a safe location where it can park to provide screenings.

Our goal is to ensure all women have access to high-quality breast health services, regardless of ability to pay or travel to a full-service imaging center. If a patient does not have insurance, is underinsured or cannot afford a mammogram, she may qualify for a screening through the Breast Health Fund at Rowan Medical Center Foundation.

Special feature

» Rowan Medical Center Foundation's Kiser Fund honors the late Dr. and Mrs. Glenn A. Kiser and their commitment to quality health services at Rowan Medical Center by funding projects which improve patient care. Each year, $500,000 is awarded in grants to Rowan Medical Center to purchase medical equipment to serve patients and physicians. From labor and delivery beds, heart monitors, ultrasound units and breast biopsy chairs to laboratory blood testing equipment, the Kiser's gift has helped so many patients.

In 2016, through the Kiser Fund, the foundation purchased an upright breast biopsy system costing nearly $100,000. This state-of-the-art system has benefited more than 400 women in our area.

The previous breast biopsy equipment required the patient to lie prone on a table with the breast extended through an opening. The upright system allows the patient to be in a seated, more comfortable position. Certain patients, due to breast size, had to leave the community to find a breast center with an upright breast biopsy system.

Foundation highlight | *Thomasville
Medical Center Health and Wellness
Education Center*

The Thomasville community has long needed more treatment for several key health conditions: addiction, substance abuse and mental illness; cardiovascular and lung disease; cardiac rehab; obesity and occupational health. To meet those needs, the Thomasville Medical Center Foundation board approved the $686,000 purchase of the 18,000-square-foot Varner building. It will become the Thomasville Medical Center Health and Wellness Education Center – providing the care the community needs.

Planned gift feature | Linda and A. Tab Williams Resource Center

In the spring of 2004, Linda and A. Tab Williams made a critical decision that would significantly impact the lives of cancer patients and families in our region. In an expression of gratitude for the care and services they had received at the Derrick L. Davis Cancer Center, the Williamses named Forsyth Medical Center Foundation as a beneficiary of their estate plan. In 2016, the $300,000 bequest created an education staple in the Cancer Center through the establishment of the Linda and A. Tab Williams Resource Center.

The Williams Resource Center offers patients and families a free, robust education resource and provides awareness and support through literature to our patients about specific types of cancer. The Williams' bequest has impacted thousands of community members in search of answers, hope and understanding — our neighbors, colleagues, family and friends who are all experiencing a similar fight against cancer.

Donor story | *Clarence & Imogene
Lambe Conference Center*

Novant Health Kernersville Medical Center recognized longtime Kernersville residents Clarence Lambe, Sr. and Imogene Lambe, during a special dedication ceremony in June 2016, after the couple donated $450,000 to complete a new 5,400-square-foot conference center at the hospital.

With a firm belief in the importance of high-quality care in Kernersville, the Lambe family was instrumental in bringing Novant Health to the community and have been generous supporters since Kernersville Medical Center opened its doors.

The Lambes’ donation allowed for the conference center to be built, furnished, and equipped to meet audio-visual needs. Completed in 2016, the space is used for hospital education and wellness programs and is available for use by the general public for meetings and special events.

We commit to the development of

Donor story | Edward I. and Agnes B. Weisiger

Throughout the years, donor support has offered Presbyterian Medical Center an opportunity to positively impact the health of our community. One of our favorite stories is that of Edward I. and Agnes B. Weisiger. Agnes had long been a supporter of Presbyterian Medical Center. She worked as a candy striper, and, as a 1963 graduate of our School of Nursing, served 30 years as a family nurse practitioner. Both Edward and Agnes experienced health scares they decided to boldly face by helping others.

In honor of Agnes' breast cancer battle, the Weisigers sponsored the hospital's mobile mammography unit. After Edward's atrial fibrillation scare, he became an advocate for others to receive heart screenings and sponsored the echocardiograph lab. In addition, the Weisiger Chapel, located near the Harris Hospice Unit, was named in Edward's honor. With his business experience as a retired CEO for Carolina Tractor, Edward also served on the Presbyterian Medical Center Foundation board for many years.

Upon learning of our new initiative to build a heart and vascular and cancer institute, Edward and Agnes felt an immediate call to help a cause that was near and dear to their hearts. They were motivated to make an outright gift of $5 million and also name the hospital as a partial beneficiary of their charitable remainder trust.

Planned giving enabled the Weisigers to make a profound impact — an impact that will leave their legacy in our community for generations to come. We are thrilled to be home to the Edward I. and Agnes B. Weisiger Cancer Institute. With this gift, Edward and Agnes have set the foundation for their legacy in jointly caring for and improving our communities.

Donor story | Joseph Robert Ott

A gift of time, talent or treasure is truly a gift from the heart. In May 2016, Prince William Medical Center Foundation received a generous gift of the heart from the late Joseph Robert Ott. Judy Garvey, trustee of Ott's estate, expressed that he wanted to give back to charities that were important to him.

Ott was born in Pennsylvania, but he made his home in Manassas upon retirement. By making Prince William Medical Center Foundation a beneficiary of his trust, Ott left a lasting legacy and tremendous investment in healthcare for our community. His $125,000 gift will impact the patients and families we serve for generations to come.

Novant Health Rowan Medical Center Foundation

Donor story | Wib Manuel

Wib Manuel grew up in Winston-Salem, North Carolina and was a high school track athlete specializing in the mile and mile relay — both races requiring extreme physical shape, endurance and focus. In the '50s and '60s, RJ Reynolds distributed complimentary packages of cigarettes in high school cafeterias during lunch. Hard to imagine this taking place today with lung cancer being the leading cause of cancer death among both men and women. Manuel developed an addiction to Marlboro cigarettes.

At 52, Manuel put the cigarettes down and never looked back; however, in 2014 he began to experience pain under his right shoulder. After many visits to Novant Health's Harrison Latimer, MD, an orthopedic surgeon in Salisbury, North Carolina, Manuel was diagnosed with lung cancer — a large tumor in the upper lobe of his right lung. Under the care of Novant Health doctors Roshni Patel, MD, Mark Wimmer, MD and Gregory Mitro, MD, Manuel started chemotherapy and radiation and prepared to have lung surgery. This was not his first experience with cancer or Novant Health. The retired Nucor Corporation executive's mother, Hazel, had breast cancer in the early '80s and his late wife, Maria, had breast and pancreatic cancer. He traveled from Salisbury to Charlotte, North Carolina and Salisbury to Winston-Salem, so Maria could receive the best care.

Manuel, grateful for the care he and his family has received at Rowan Medical Center, Presbyterian Medical Center and Forsyth Medical Center, started supporting the Rowan Medical Center Foundation in 2011. He was instrumental in bringing Rowan Hospice & Palliative Care to Salisbury, which opened its doors in 2012. He and his wife, Julie, are now avid supporters of bringing a new cancer center to Salisbury, which will require a $20 million investment by the foundation.

Today, Manuel is doing well and preparing for his two-year health screening. Golfing and traveling with Julie keep him busy and fulfilled. The Manuels hope to one day see a cancer center in Salisbury, so the region can provide comprehensive cancer care to its residents.

Donor story | Tom Byrnes, Jr., MD

A North Carolina native, Tom Byrnes, Jr., MD, was born in Durham and grew up in Charlotte where he attended Charlotte Central High School, now Central Piedmont Community College. His father, Tom Byrnes, MD, was a pathologist at Presbyterian Hospital, Mercy Hospital, the Professional Building on North Tryon, where Charlotte's early 20th-century medical district was located and at the Doctors Building on Kings Drive. Byrnes, Jr., MD went onto Princeton University where he studied liberal arts to satisfy his passion for music and opted for the pre-med track.

After Princeton, Byrnes, Jr., MD went to medical school at Duke University and completed residencies at Emory Healthcare in Atlanta, Georgia and Balboa Hospital, now Naval Medical Center San Diego. Byrnes, Jr., MD deployed with the 1st Marine Division for the Vietnam War in the late '60s and upon his return to the United States, settled in Thomasville, North Carolina. There he became an internal medicine doctor at Community General Hospital, now Thomasville Medical Center. When asked what drew him to Thomasville, Byrnes, Jr., MD expressed that he wanted to practice state-of-the-art medicine in a small town.

Though Byrnes, Jr., MD retired in 1998, his desire for a healthy Thomasville community keeps him involved. He is an active member, historian and parliamentarian on the Thomasville Medical Center Foundation board. He and his wife, Shirley, a retired nurse manager who served at Thomasville Medical Center, were influential in the decision to purchase the Varner building located on the medical center's campus. With support from the Byrneses, board members and the community, the foundation is currently campaigning to raise $3.5 million to transition the Varner building to the future home of the Health and Wellness Education Center, which will provide comprehensive behavioral health, chronic disease management, occupational health and physical therapy and referral support to the community.

Emergency Room Expansion

Behavioral health systems are often fragmented and difficult to navigate causing more emergency room visits. When behavioral health patients visit the emergency room they experience long wait times (sometimes days). On any given day in North Carolina there are, on average, 78 patients waiting in emergency rooms for an inpatient bed. Brunswick Medical Center’s campaign to expand its emergency room to create a separate eight-bed wing for behavioral health patients will reduce wait times and aid in keeping patients safe. The expansion will include technology for telehealth and specialized staff trained to care for behavioral health patients.

When residents of Rowan County are faced with a cancer diagnosis, they experience a number of overwhelming emotions and have many questions and concerns. Rowan Medical Center’s campaign to build a cancer center on its campus will address a high priority community health need for comprehensive cancer services close to home. Currently, many patients must travel to Novant Health’s greater Charlotte market or greater Winston-Salem market for cancer services not offered in Rowan County. The new cancer center will bridge cancer services between these two markets and care for patients every step of the way on their journey toward survivorship. This state-of-the-art facility and its clinicians will have the tools, expertise and skills to provide sophisticated diagnostic tests and treatments.
